INVESTING IN OUR FUTURE LEADERS

The Australian Government's New Colombo Plan is providing a new generation of Australians with practical experience living, studying and gaining workplace skills in the Indo-Pacific region.

These experiences can be transformative, shaping new futures for our students and new opportunities for Australia.

The Australian Government recognises the benefits of a labour force equipped to do business in our region, and work placements are a hallmark of the New Colombo Plan.

These opportunities enable New Colombo Plan students to test their skills in real life situations, build cross-cultural competencies and develop professional networks.

Students return to Australia with the practical skills and maturity to make an early contribution to Australia's engagement with our neighbours and to our national prosperity.

I have been delighted by the enthusiastic embrace of the New Colombo Plan by the business community, which has provided overseas opportunities for young Australians.

As the program continues to expand in the years ahead, continued private-sector support and engagement, together with support from Australia's universities, will be critical to its success.

New Colombo Plan Business Champions advocate the value of Indo-Pacific study and work-based experience to the Australian community.

I encourage business to become involved with the following initiatives:

The New Colombo Plan Internship and Mentorship Network allows organisations to register online their interest in offering work placements to New Colombo Plan students studying overseas.

The Mobility Partners Program is supporting Australian universities to develop innovative partnerships with the private-sector to create new opportunities for New Colombo Plan mobility students.

Sponsorship opportunities are available to connect your business with the New Colombo Plan and associate your business with one of our exceptional scholars.

These programs support the efforts of universities, business and government to deliver new opportunities for Australian students and to build the future productivity and prosperity of our nation.
