OFFICIAL

Dear s 22(1)(a)(ii)

DISR has shared with us for comment the attached draft consultation paper relating to its review of the consultation requirements for offshore petroleum and gas activities.

As you know, recent Federal Court decisions on the identification of "relevant persons" for the purposes of consultations related to offshore activities s 33(a)(iii), s 47C(1) Those decisions have mostly focussed on consultations with First Nations Australians (hence sharing this with you, s 22(1)(a)(ii)

Consultation on this topic is the first phase of a broader Offshore Environment Management Review.

I have made a few initial comments in the attached, and would be grateful for any further input from your areas by midday tomorrow 5 December.

Good Afternoon s 22(1)(a)(ii)

Thanks for your time on the phone. As discussed, please find attached a copy of the draft consultation paper the department has prepared on the current consultation requirements for offshore petroleum and greenhouse gas activities for DFAT's consideration and comment.

The paper has been prepared as the first phase of the Offshore Environment Management Review and seeks to understand how the consultation requirements currently in place under the Offshore Petroleum and Greenhouse Gas Storage (Environment) Regulations 2023 can be clarified and improved to ensure meaningful consultation and engagement occurs during the development of environment plans.

This paper is seeking views on:

- how consultation requirements and processes can be clearer
- how we can enable all stakeholders to better understand how consultation for offshore activities should be done.

At this stage, we are intending to submit the consultation paper for the Minister for Resources consideration next week and would welcome any comments from DFAT by COB Tuesday 5 December. We apologise in advance for this short time period and we would be happy to arrange a meeting to discuss the consultation paper with you further.

Please feel free to contact me should you have any questions or wish to discuss further.

Hi s 47F(1)

We understand that Minister King's office is seeking to undertake a public consultation process as part of the Offshore Environment Management Review process. Specifically:

- DISR has consulted DFAT and other agencies on the draft consultation paper.
- Timelines are yet to be confirmed but likely open later this month and expected to close January/February,
  - we would notify INPEX and key stakeholders of consultation process once open.
- Following this consultation process, policy options will be developed and considered by government.

Firstly, many thanks for DFAT's time over the last few weeks and your feedback on our consultation process.

Please find attached a revised copy of the consultation paper and a table addressing the comments received from PMC. We would appreciate if you could review our response items and provide any additional feedback by COB Monday 18 December. This will facilitate clearance of the paper and submission of the paper to our Minister next week. Please note this is working draft and we are updating still to reflect comments from our MO and improve readability.

Consultation dates have been revised slightly and the paper is now expected the paper will be released on Monday 8 January 2024. We will reach out to DFAT next week to coordinate stakeholder engagement and notification of the release of the paper.

Even better, some TPs if you want them

- The 2023–24 Budget provided $12 million over 3 years for a review of the environmental management regime for offshore petroleum and greenhouse gas storage activities under the OPGGS Act to ensure it:
  - is fit-for-purpose for a decarbonising economy
  - reflects best practice for offshore environmental management
  - is consistent with reforms to the national environmental legislation being developed under the Government's Nature Positive Plan
  - is consistent with Australia's international obligations for emissions and sustainable development.
- The review will include a focus on consultation requirements for offshore activities, including with First Nations peoples.
- The review will be progressed over three years and involve public consultation on issues papers and policy reform options. It will provide iterative advice rather than one final report, so that progress can be made on some issues while others are still being considered.

Martin – the DISR consultation on offshore regulations I mentioned, (including a draft consultation paper) was due to kick off now but hasn't happened yet. I expect it will happen in the new year now.

the Government is looking at offshore regulations, recognising the challenges companies face, and we expect there will be consultations early in 2024. We will update s 47E(d), s 33(a)(iii) is underway.

Good luck with it.

Let me know if you have any questions or need anything else. Regards s 22(1)(a)(ii)

Key points

- Santos' Barossa gas project comprises several parts subject to separate assessments by the department and by Australia's offshore petroleum regulator, the National Offshore Petroleum Safety and Environmental Management Authority (NOPSEMA).
- The department is currently assessing a portion of the pipeline that will connect up to the Barossa gas field.

- The department's assessment is progressing under the Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 (EPBC Act).
- The project will be approved if it meets the relevant requirements of the EPBC Act.
- NOPSEMA is the regulator for offshore petroleum extraction activities. Any questions regarding the progression of the Barossa gas project in Commonwealth waters should be directed to NOPSEMA.
  - NOPSEMA's regulatory functions are exercised under the Offshore Petroleum and Greenhouse Gas Storage Act 2006 (OPGGs Act).
- NOPSEMA's approvals under the OPGGS Act have the effect of an approval under Part 10 of the EPBC Act. However, NOPSEMA's assessment is independent of the department.

Background

- On 21 September 2022, Justice Bromberg of the Federal Court of Australia decided in Tipakalippa v National Offshore Petroleum Safety and Environmental Management Authority (NOPSEMA) (No 2) [2022] FCA 1121 that NOPSEMA's decision to accept Santos' Development Drilling and Completions Environment Plan (Drilling EP) relating to the Barossa offshore gas project should be set aside. This was because NOPSEMA was not lawfully satisfied that the Drilling EP demonstrated that Santos consulted with each person that it was legally required to consult with. Therefore, a necessary precondition for accepting the Drilling EP by NOPSEMA did not exist and the acceptance given by NOPSEMA was legally invalid.
- On 2 December 2022, the Federal Court of Australia rejected an appeal by Santos against a decision that it failed to adequately consult with affected persons in relation to its Drilling EP, and therefore the previous decision was upheld.
  - The case was Santos NA Barossa Pty Ltd v Tipakalippa [2022] FCAFC 193
- s 42(1)
- The Darwin Pipeline Duplication project, which is being assessed under the EPBC Act, is proposed to connect the Barossa gas field with the existing Santos processing and export facility in Darwin
  - The next step of Darwin pipeline duplication project is for the proponents environmental assessment to be displayed for public comment.

Hi Warren,

As mentioned, I'm seeking your clearance on the redrafted versions of the Info MinSub for TTM & FM requested below. Noting I'm in training the next two days, I have also assigned this to you on PDMS.

Again apologies for the delay. We did flag the delay with MOs s 47E(d)

Helen cleared a version of the submission on Friday (attachment – FAS Cleared). However, when I looked at it, I noticed that it only indirectly address the points s 22(1)(a)(ii) had raised. I have re-drafted (attachment – version titled Redrafted and PDMS versions) to try to more directly address the questions.

Happy to discuss

The Japanese government has called on the Australian government to give an "immediate and sincere" response to its list of inquiries regarding the enforcement from July 1 of Safeguard Mechanism reforms, including a request to exempt a new gas development project, a Japanese government source told S&P Global Commodity Insights June 29.

The source added that Tokyo believes Canberra's yet-to-be-seen response would likely impact not only Japan's LNG business but also affect various other prospective cooperation arrangements, including on hydrogen and ammonia developments in Australia.

The Safeguard Mechanism applies to industrial facilities, including oil and gas production and mining operations that emit more than 100,000 mt/year of CO<sub>2</sub> equivalent, and is expected to require offsetting of CO<sub>2</sub> emissions through steps such as purchasing carbon credits or carbon capture and storage.

The mechanism will require the subjected facilities to cut net emissions by 4.9% annually from July 1, 2023, by 2030, while new facilities including gas fields are expected to have a baseline of net-zero emissions from purchasing carbon credits for CCS from the start of operations.

In a three-page long questionnaire sent to the Australian government three weeks ago, Japan sought clarity over availability of Australian Carbon Credit Units (ACCUs) and Australia's readiness for a carbon capture and storage project over two jurisdictions, the source said.

"It remains unclear about how much ACCUs will be supplied to the market, as well as the Australian government has not clarified how much it will prepare the ACCUs aside from the market," the source said.

Japan has been seeking assurances from Australia that there will be sufficient supply of ACCUs in order to be prepared for any potential leaps in demand and price, the source said.

The source also said that Japan is seeking an exemption for the Barossa gas project, in which Japan's JERA participates. The project is scheduled to start production in around 2025 after having already executed a final investment decision.

Barossa project

Japan is concerned that the Safeguard Mechanism reforms could result in a loss of "predictability" for the Barossa gas project, because of uncertainty over ACCU availability, as well as a lack of clarity surrounding Australia's readiness to deal with the planned CCS project in East Timor, the source said.

The source added that the Barossa gas project envisages transporting CO<sub>2</sub> from Australia to the Bayu-Undan oil and gas field in the Timor Sea, requiring the governments of Australia and East Timor to adjust legal frameworks under the London Protocol.

"The frameworks need to be established in around the next year in order to be in time, so that we are asking [Australia] whether they can really do it with East Timor," the source said.

Without clarity over the legal frameworks, the Barossa gas project would see delays in starting up its CCS project, and its project partners would end up purchasing ACCUs, the source said.

The Barossa gas field, located off Australia's Northern Territory, links to Darwin LNG by pipeline and is expected to start production around 2025, with CCS starting up from around 2027 and reaching fully-fledged CCS in around 2030, the source said.

JERA has a 12.5% stake in the Barossa project, operated by Santos with a 50% stake. SK E&S has a 37.5% stake.

Minister of Economy, Trade and Industry Yasutoshi Nishimura said June 16 that Australia's Safeguard Mechanism reforms would have an "extremely significant" impact on Japan's LNG business in the country.

Nishimura said requiring projects that have executed final investment decisions to be net-zero from day one would create unexpected costs and raised concerns over protecting investors.

Referencing Nishimura's remarks, the source said that Japan is concerned about the validity retrospective application of regulations will have on FID-executed projects.

"Such acts would make Japanese companies reluctant and deter them from pursuing any new projects," the source added.

Australia is by far the largest LNG supplier to Japan, accounting for 42.7% of the country's total LNG imports last year.

"For Japan, we need to ask ourselves whether it is really right to rely more than 40% of [LNG supply] from Australia," the source said.
